

Section 2 would amend KRS 342.035 to provide for waiver of required utilization review by a self-insured employer in certain circumstances.

Section 3 would amend KRS 342.040 to provide that no interest shall accrue after filing an application to resolve a workers comp claim unless an administrative law judge determines that the employer, carrier, or payment obligor caused a delay in payment of benefits. That same section would reduce interest payable on delayed payments from 12% to 6%, and would reduce interest payable on benefits denied, delayed or terminated without reasonable foundation from the current 18% to 12%.

Section 4 would amend KRS 342.125, which addresses reopening and review of a workers comp award, to provide that an order granting or denying benefits entered after an original final award will not extend time to reopen a claim.

Section 5 of the bill would extend to claims for compensation for cumulative trauma injury the same notice and application requirements that apply to other work-related injuries, and would bar the right to workers compensation unless done.

Section 6 would amend KRS 342.320 to raise the maximum attorney's fees for workers compensation claims, whether on behalf of the employee or the employer, from $12,000 to $18,000.

Section 7 would amend KRS 342.700 to provide that, when an employer has paid compensation to an injured employee for which a third person is legally liable, the employer may recover from the third person medical expenses it has paid to or on behalf of the injured employee.

Section 8 would amend KRS 342.730 to provide that, where an employee is entitled to income benefits for temporary total disability, returns to light duty or alternative job duty, the income benefits otherwise payable would be offset against the wages paid to the employee for the light- or alternative-duty work.

Part III: Fiscal Explanation, Bill Provisions, and Estimated Cost

The fiscal impact of HB 296 on local governments is indeterminable but would be positive.

The impact of HB 296 on local governments would arise in their capacity as employers. The 15-year limit on payment of medical benefits in some cases and the termination of benefits at age 70 or four (4) years after injury in all cases would reduce pay-outs and increase predictability for insurers. Reducing interest on unpaid benefits, waiving utilization reviews by self-insurers, reducing the number of required drug tests, prohibition on accrual of interest on income benefits unless the employer or insurance carrier caused a delay in payments – all are measures that should financially benefit all employers, including local governments. If the local government purchases workers' compensation insurance through an insurance carrier or self-insurance group, the provision may result in an indirect cost savings as the reduction in interest rates could lead to lower exposure and, ultimately, lower worker's compensation insurance rates. There could be direct cost savings if the local government has a high deductible policy and is responsible for payments until its worker's comp insurance policy kicks in.
